HUNDREDS KILLED.

Iroquois Theater, Crowded With a Matinee Audience, Converted Into a Seething Cauldron of Flame.

In the Mad Plunge for the Exits Hundreds Are Thrown Down and Trampled Into Unrecognizable Pulp.

CORPSES FOUND PILED UP IN MASSES

Chicago, Dec. 30.—About 550 people were killed in ten minutes this afternoon during a fire in the Iroquois Theater, the newest, the largest, and, as far as human power could make it, the safest theater in Chicago. Estimates of the dead and injured vary. The police account of the dead is 536. The estimate of the newspapers is 562.

Besides this there are 55 people missing, the majority of whom are probably among the dead in the morgues and various undertaking establishments.

Eighty-six of the dead have been positively identified and 92 others are known to be injured.

It will be several days before all of the dead are known and identified. There are bodies lying by the dozens to-night in the undertaking rooms, in the police stations and in the hospitals, from which nearly everything that could reveal their identity to those who knew them best is gone. Their clothing is torn to rags or burned to cinders, and their faces have been trampled into an unrecognizable pulp by the heels of the crowd that trampled them down as they fled for safety.

The fire broke out during the second act of the play "Mr. Bluebeard," which was the first dramatic production given in the theater since its erection. The company, which was very large, escaped to the street in safety, nearly all of them, however, being compelled to flee into the snowy streets with no clothing but their stage costumes. A few members of the company sustained minor injuries, but none were seriously hurt.

The accounts of the origin of the fire are conflicting and none of them certain, but the best reason given is that an electric wire near the lower part of a piece of drop scenery suddenly broke and was grounded.

Asbestos Curtains Failed to Work.

The fire in itself, up to this time, was not serious and possibly could have been checked had not the asbestos curtain failed to work. As soon as the fire was discovered, Eddie Foy, the chief comedian of the company, shouted to lower the curtain and this was immediately done. It descended about half way and then stuck. The fire thus was given practically a flue through which a strong draft was setting, aided by the doors, which has been thrown open in the front of the theater.

With a roar and a bound the flames shot through the opening over the heads of the people on the first floor and reaching clear up to those in the first balcony, caught them and burned them to death where they sat. Immediately following the rush of the flames there came an explosion which lifted the entire roof of the theater from its walls, shattering the great skylight into fragments.

It is expected the explosion was caused by the flames coming in contact with the gas reservoirs of the theater, causing them to burst.

About 1,200 people were in the building. About 800 were in the balconies and nearly all of them were killed or injured.

FAITHFUL DOG.

Guarded Treasure, But Death Was His Sad Reward.

Here is a pathetic story told to my informant, the venerable Judge N. A. Patterson, by his father, as an incident of which he knew, says the Springfield Republican.

In the early days of North Carolina a man rode a long distance on horseback to collect a debt of several hundred dollars. He took with him, for company and as a protection against robbers, a dog to which he had long felt much attached. He collected the money, all in silver dollars. These he tied up in a strong sack, lashed it to the saddle behind him and started for home.

When they had traveled about half of the homeward journey the dog manifested a great deal of uneasiness, to which he gave expression by nervous barking and frequent dives at the horse's forelegs. The man was sorely puzzled, and watched the dog for some time to see if he could find an explanation of its strange conduct. His reluctant conclusion was that it had been bitten by a mad dog and was the victim of hydrophobia. And so to save his horse and to put the poor dog out of the misery he supposed it was suffering, he drew a pistol and shot it. Not wishing to see it die, he applied the spur to his horse and rode rapidly for some distance. The thought came to him, "I would rather have lost the money than to have been forced to kill that good dog."

Thus reunited of the treasure, he put his hand around behind the saddle, to see if the bag was safe, but it was not there. He turned and rapidly rode back. When he reached the point where the dog first commenced to bark and plunge at the horse's legs he found the bag of coin, and the poor victim of his cruel mistake dying there with his paws resting patiently on either side of his master's treasure. He had tried so hard to make the master understand, but had failed, and paid his life as the price of his fidelity.

SEATS IN CONGRESS.

Assigned by Lot in Lower House—Senate Has More System.

When a new congress meets there is a lottery for the choice of seats. The newest and freshest member from a backwoods district may be the lucky man to have his name drawn from the box by the blindfolded page and to have first choice of all the seats in the great hall. The veteran of half a score of congresses, a man of power and note, may be the last of the long line and forced to content himself with a perch in the extreme rear.

This is democracy with a vengeance, and, of course, says Success, it would never do for the aristocratic upper branch. There the senator who gets a good seat keeps it as long as he remains a senator. Such men as Allison, Hale, Hoar, Callahan and others have sat all the way from 10 to 25 years at one desk. When an old senator with an advantageously located seat drops out through death or failure to secure reelection, some other senator from the rear applies for his seat and gets it, the rule being, "first come, first served."

New senators are compelled to take the less desirable desks in the rear of the chamber, to await their turn for a chance at better ones. Thus in the senate there is a slow but steady movement from the rear toward the front of the chamber—a movement highly suggestive of the senatorial system based upon prerogative and precedence.

Even more striking is the method of assigning senators to places upon committees. Here again prerogative is everything. If the chairman of a committee dies or leaves the senate the man of the majority political party who has served longest upon that committee becomes his successor. The rule is invariable, though of course complications occasionally arise. If a senior committeeman is chairman of another important committee, he may be compelled to surrender one or the other.

Just as Bad.

Men never gossip. They simply mention a name to their male friends.

STREETS OF GOLD.

Dawson Regs on One of the Richest Placer Deposits in Alaska.

"The streets of Dawson are paved with gold?" Two prospectors who have just returned from the frozen north, says the Salt Lake Tribune, confirm the dispatches which have been sent out from Alaska's municipal gem that the streets of that far northern metropolis are carpeted with yellow dust. The men are John Bigelow and H. Woolaver. Bigelow is a Denver man and has been in the north for several years. Woolaver has been in Alaska for eight years, hunting the precious metal, and he says that his coming back to civilization is like the entrance into a strange land.

"The feverish impatience has left Dawson," said Woolaver. "Money is plenty there, and business is good and prices are reasonable. Except for the extremely cold weather you would scarcely know it from any pushing western town. People have given up the dreams and excitement and settled down to business. It is, of course, easier to get in and out of the country than formerly, and we are in close touch with the outside world. When I first went there you were locked up in a great snow vault that had the sky for a ceiling and the mountains for a wall. It was difficult to get in and dangerous to get out."

"Gold?" Plenty of it. New strikes are being made in unexpected places, but there has been no discovery of another Klondike. In my opinion, there never will be. Before I left intense excitement was created by the discovery that the principal street of Dawson rests upon one of the richest placer deposits in the country. A hole was being dug in front of one of the principal business houses of the city, and the prospector was panning out large pay dirt. It has also been discovered that the streets are fairly lined with gold that will pay to work. The streets were filled in with the washings of some of the mines, and then, too, the spring freshets bring down dirt that carries gold.

In some places the streets have been found to be very rich, and this dirt is being taken up to be replaced by other earth, while the street dirt will be washed in the spring, when it is not so hard to get water.

"Of course, in the early days they were not so particular. They took out the coarsest dust and let the rest go. Then other parties came with better machinery, and the tailings were gone over again. Now they are again attracting the attention of companies who have still better apparatus for getting out the gold. Some of the tailings were used for filling the streets, and this dirt is going to be worked over again by the new companies as fast as they can get permission. "There is scarcely a foot of ground in that portion of Alaska that does not carry gold. Some dirt does not pay to work, but the gold is there, nevertheless. There are people there who are not finding gold. There are endless opportunities there just as there are in every new country. But there are men there, too, who are freezing, hoping and starving because their pride or determination will not let them return to the states. They have loved ones who are waiting for them, but they will slave and freeze and starve, hoping against hope for 'tomorrow' to bring the good fortune they have been digging so long and patiently for. They are getting old, these men. Gray is coming into their hair. Work and exposure is telling on them, but they are sure 'tomorrow' will come. They know it, and to-morrow comes to these men in some shape or other. For most of them it is the long-sought 'pocket.' But when it is covered up again we put up a rough, wooden headstone at one end. This is life in the Klondike."

Disappointed.

"Yes, indeed," pointed the girl who was gathering chestnuts, "Klondike is too mean for anything."

"What now?" asked her chum with the faded colors.

"Why, last night in the vestibule he said: 'This is the last time!'"

ARE YOU SATISFIED?

If Not, What Better Proof Can Hopkinsville Residents Ask For?

This is the statement of a Hopkinsville citizen.

The testimony of a neighbor. You can readily investigate it. The proof should convince you. J. W. Pritchett, retired grocer, of 752 East 7th St., says: "My back has given me a great deal of trouble. The pain was not continually severe but came on by intermittent spells which were sometimes very painful, especially after exertion of any kind. Being constantly on the outlook for something to relieve me, I happened to read of Doan's Kidney Pills and was so impressed with the testimonials as to their worth, that I procured a box at Thomas A. Trahern's drug store. They promptly relieved the pain and the secretions were soon rendered normal. The Pills benefited me in every way and I hope that my endorsement will be the means of extending relief to some other sufferer."

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents. Foster-McBarnes Co., St. Paul, N. Y., sole agents for United States. Remember name—Doan's—and take no substitute.

Judge Miller, of Louisville, decided the disbarment proceedings against Charles G. Ritchie, W. L. Dettlinger by exonerating the former and disbarring the latter for one year.

Don't Worry.

This is easier said than done, but may be of some help to you. The matter. If the case is something over which you have no control it is obvious that worrying will do nothing for the matter in the least. On the other hand, if it is within your control you have only to act. When you have a cold and fear an attack of pneumonia, buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and use it judiciously and all cause for worry as to the outcome will quickly disappear. There is no danger of pneumonia when it is used for sale by Cook & Higgins, druggists.

Circuit Clerk-elect Will L. Welles, Jr., of Jefferson county, has announced the appointment of John H. Page as chief clerk with the full list of his assistants, effective next Monday, Jan. 4.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm, of Ferguson Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's Pain Balm advertised for sprains and soreness, and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so much pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to others. For sale by Cook & Higgins, druggists.

Christmas Holidays.

Now that the holidays are over and you have abused your digestive organs until they are on the point of rebellion, the proper thing to do is to get back in working condition as speedily as possible. "A stitch in time saves nine" is an old saw but it is an old truth in homely dress that applies with greatest force to the human body. A little trifling ailment which was not considered worthy of a second thought has in countless instances cost a life. "A stitch in time" would have saved much suffering and distress to the victim and his family. Those who have to fight the battle of life, the wage-earners, must at once get in shape for another year's work. If they start out with an ailing body, be it ever so trifling, they cannot do their best and if no attention is paid to the trouble it soon becomes severe, entailing loss of time and money or worse. Prudent persons will get rid of the disorder as speedily as possible. A few doses of Prickly Ash Bitters will do this work. It will cleanse and strengthen the digestive organs, empty and purify the bowels, regulate the whole system and impart a feeling of strength and energy that will make work a pleasure. It is good for the whole family. Children who are puny, sick or who have eaten too freely of sweet stuff will immediately improve under its beneficial effect. For ladies particularly those subject to headache, indigestion, constipation or the ailments peculiar to their sex it is of the greatest value as it purifies the system thoroughly tones up the vital organs, clears the complexion and promotes good appetite, vigor and cheerfulness.

CHANCE FOR INVENTORS.

Fortune of $25,000 Awaits Man Who Will Make Grape Acid.

Do you want $25,000? Here's your chance. California, which produces so many grapes, says Everybody's Magazine, is eager to learn how to make grape acids out of them. Grape acids are raw materials for tartaric acid. The United States is a large importer of them. As the grape ripens, a part of its acid changes into sugar. The problem is to change that sugar back into acid, especially tartaric acid, which is worth some 31 cents a pound wholesale, while to change measure into weight a pound of California wine, made from grapes costing $10 a ton, is worth only about a cent. There is a way to do it. The inventor of this method can transmit that sugar into acid. The American Grape Acid association of San Francisco offers him $25,000, and gives him until December 1, 1904, to earn it. The money has been "put up" with Mr. Daniel Meyer, banker. Young chemists, go and catch that tartaric acid, that little nest egg.

SURE OF THEIR CHARACTERS.

French Women Chained to Don Quixote. The utility, not to say the necessity, of some of the costumes accessories to costume that have been invented for the use of a woman who automobiles ought to be enough to prevent pretty women from ever indulging in the use of motor-cars. If anything, it is a deterrent woman who is possessed of taste a pleasure of following fashion, says [illegible] of [illegible].

To bury, to disguise, in an exquisite figure in the folds of an ungraceful just coat, to designate one's self in heavy vulgar garments, sometimes even to venture on a cloak of stiff, maddening leather—these things no longer call for comment. But one is moved to marvel at the articles of apparel that costume have been bold enough to contrive as a protection from wind and sunburn. One could almost believe that usefulness and beauty were mutually exclusive, as with rare exceptions the inventors have escaped from the commonplace only to fall into the ugly.

One customer has a fancy for a sort of cloth armor, a real black velvet mask, the cover covered with enormous protruding goggles, spectacles, while a hood envelops the head and protects the hair from dust.

Another, retaining the goggles spectacles, covers the entire face with cloth, but places at the base of the nose a viewing hole, which gives the patient—if one may say it—a head like some queer bird, a cross between a parrot and a harpy.

Another, thinking to improve on this, attempts to give the mask with which he covers the entire face the appearance of life, modeling it and enameling it in natural colors, but without succeeding in removing that painful and irritating impression which a face thus disguised always produces.

Yet another has simply taken the same Chinese scholar's goggles which his rivals have used and inserted them in a lace veil.

A number of automobile devotees disdain these complicated and barbarous machines, and content themselves with fastening around their caps a more or less opaque veil, loosely draped. The face is thus concealed entirely, at the same time it is not made grotesque, and it is completely protected against the inclemencies of the weather.

If the English journalists are to be believed, the English "chauffeur" scorns these extreme styles, and consents, much against her will, to conceal her features and disfigure herself. Instead, she wears only a veil, which leaves her face quite visible. The unkindly disposed, smiling ironically, will be tempted to recall in this connection the end of a dialogue between an Englishman and a Frenchman—two diplomats—at a time when Napoleon was signing a treaty of peace in which was demanded pretty heavy money indemnity.

"You are really astonishing, you French people," said the Englishman, "in thus exacting money as a prize of war. We are satisfied, we English, to fight for glory simply."

"What would you have, my lord?" replied the other jester. "One fights always for what he has not got!"

In the case at hand, French sportswomen are so sure of their superiority in point of elegance, so confident of their charm, that they do not hesitate to sacrifice them partly in exchange for a keen pleasure, deriving their satisfaction from the gliding along the high road at a texpress speed, not in the effect they produce on the passer-by.

THE WEAK HEART.

How to Make It Strong If Not Organically Affected.

There seems to be something more noticeable to the owner about a weak heart than a weak head, says the New York Medical Times. The possessor of a weak head, as a rule, finds that it bothers him very little; in fact, it is generally a source of great comfort to him, such being the wise provision of nature. Possible lack of brains also is too common a complaint to attract much attention from the world at large. When it comes to the average weak heart, however, it insists on being evident on all occasions; if the owner makes for a street car at unusual speed he is given a turn of breathlessness that may bother him all day. If he climbs several unaccustomed flights of stairs, again he is warned of his weak pumping organ. This brings him in time to the doctor with the story that he fears he has heart disease. But genuine weak hearts are not as common as we might suppose. Many a smoker has an instability of that organ due to tobacco, which has not really affected it strongly, as the symptoms would point out. Many a dyspeptic blames it on his heart; many a tight-lacing woman ascribes her heartlessness to this much-maligned organ. If we can relieve the dyspepsia, stop the excessive smoking or tight lacing the weak heart disappears. Again, even if the heart is really weak it may be only a symptom of general lack of tone, which may be easily removed. Christianson, the well-known English lecturer, when on the subject of weak hearts used to tell his students: "Gentlemen, the best tonic for a weak heart is a good brisk walk." The muscles of the average city-bred man are flabby because of lack of exercise, hence his heart muscles are weak. Exercise those muscles, eliminate the products of overeating or rich feeding, fill the body with good blood from lungs filled with fine ozone and the heart will improve. Should there be no actual organic disease of the heart, plenty of good walking, with, if possible, some light gymnastic exercise, will dispel heartlessness and heart weakness. It also removes the tendency to subsequent ills, such as gout, rheumatism, etc., which may fall on the patient in his enfeebled state.

CDRIOSITIES OF LONDON.

A Bridge That Pays Taxes for Imaginary Houses.

The first London bridge built of stone was completed in the time of King John, several wooden bridges having been previously swept away or burnt. The architect, says Golden Penny, was a priest of St. Mary's Colechurch, the chapel in which Thomas a-Becket was baptized, and which stood until the best fire in Cornhill Lane, on the north side of the Poultry. London existed without aldermen till 1242, when some of its 26 wards received their names from their first aldermen. The first lord mayor of London was elected in 1189. His name was Henry Fitzlwyn, and he occupied the civic chair 24 years. Sir Richard Whittington served the office of lord mayor three times, the last in 1419. He founded his college dedicated to the Holy Ghost and the Virgin Mary in 1424, and his almshouses at Highbury near the spot where, as a poor boy, he had sat down to rest in leaving London, and heard Bow bells calling him back to wealth and greatness. London bridge pays taxes for imaginary houses on it. At any rate it still yields the rates and taxes of the houses which the old bridge supported. A correspondent of the City Press explains that when, about the year 1756, it was decided to clear the houses from the bridge, certain taxes and tithes survived, and have been paid ever since by the bridge house estates to the rectors of St. Magnus and St. Olave churches. Not less than $300,000 has been paid to these two parishes since the decreed houses which formerly yielded them were pulled down. The taxes survived not only the houses, but the old bridge itself. And now there is a movement to stop this serial ghost story of taxation. But it is certain that the stoppage can only be effected by regular commutation at some other equitable arrangement.
